BAND IN UNIFORM

Hope's Bandboys to Back Up Bobcats With Spectacular Splendor

A six-game winning streak of the Smackover High School Buckaroos will be at stake here Friday night when the team clashes with Coach Foy Hammons' Bobcats at the high school stadium.

The Buckaroos have bowed over every team to date with the exception of Fordyce, losing to the Red-bugs by a lone touchdown in the opening game of the season.

Two of their victories include wins over Warren and Prescott.

The Bobcats have a season record of five victories against only two defeats.

Kickoff at 8 p. m.

Starting time of the game Friday night has been moved back 15 minutes to allow 500 boosters coming here on a special train from Smackover to reach the field. The kick-off is set for 8 p. m.

One Buckaroo special is due to arrive here at 7:30 p. m. It will be met by three school buses to transport fans to the game. Hope fans having seats available in their cars are asked by Coach Hammons to drive by the stadium and pick up visitors.

The Smackover team was due to arrive in Hope about 2 p. m. Friday in automobiles.

Coach Hammons said at noon that the Bobcats were in good shape with the exception of Anderson, Stone and Bright. Anderson attempted to boot a football Thursday, his foot striking the ground instead of the ball. The foot is swollen and it is doubtful whether he will play much.

Stone is suffering from boils. He will play, but will probably be slowed down. Bright injured a shoulder in last week's game and may be

Sacred Painting Is Given Church

Madonna, Drawn by the Late Mrs. E. L. Prall, on Display in Hope

An artistic painting of the Madonna Virgin Mary and the Savior has been donated to Our Lady of Good Hope church by Miss Beatrice Prall, of Saginaw, Mich., but formerly of Hope. Miss Prall is public librarian in the Michigan city.

The painting was drawn by Miss Prall's mother, the late Mrs. Effie L. Prall, who several years ago taught an art class in Hope. The painting was drawn in 1907.

Her mother's love for Hope and its people, tempted Miss Prall to present the painting to the local church. Persons interested in the painting may view it in a display window of Hope Furniture company's store.

Earthquakes Strike Eastern States

Changing of Ice Pressure Causes Panic in 7 States

Damage Slight, But Thousands Rush Out of Homes to Safety

HELENA HIT AGAIN

2 Killed Thursday for Total of 7—Terror Returns on Friday

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The earth crust's instantaneous reaction to a 35,000-year-old withdrawal of millions of tons of ice pressure Friday caused the East's most serious earthquake in decades to roll across seven state and three Canadian provinces.

The damage was slight along the Eastern seaboard, although thousands fled from their homes.

Montana Rocks Again

HELENA, Mont.—(AP)—Helena felt another shock Friday—as more Eastern shocks were predicted.

Two More Killed

HELENA, Mont.—(AP)—An earthquake which rocked an area 500 miles wide centered upon Helena Thursday, killing at least two persons and injuring scores.

Several buildings in this capital city of 12,000, already weakened by more than 50 death shocks in 19 days, shuddered and collapsed.

The possibility of total losses in Helena exceeding $5,000,000 was seen in reports that tremors might have wrought more extensive damage than the rolling jolts of October 18. Damage then was placed at $2,500,000.

Residents who fled their homes were forced to endure near-zero temperatures which threatened to go under Wednesday night's four-below minimum.

Striking with a rumble shortly before noon, the severe tremor shook the city for 15 seconds, and sent its quiver through mountainous western Montana where it rumbled under Butte, Great Falls and Anaconda.

The movement was felt 500 miles to the west of Spokane, Wash., and extended into Canada.

Thursday's death brought the earthquake toll to seven, five having died previously.

Freeze Forecast in Northern Counties—Fair and Colder Here

A cold wave is scheduled to strike southwest Arkansas Saturday, shutting the summer-like temperature which prevailed here Friday.

Despite Thursday night's downpour the heat continued Friday under cloudy skies. The Weather Man, however, forecast frost and freezing temperatures for north Arkansas Friday night—with fair and colder weather in the southern counties Saturday.

Murder Trial of Roy House Begun

Declares Companion Brutally Clubbed Old Man to Death

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—Roy House, who will be 21 November 15, facing a first degree murder charge in circuit court here, related the details of the brutal killing of Tom Menser, 70, before a startled jury Thursday night.

House admitted having participated in the crime, but declared that Ayliff Drayper, 23, indicted jointly with the youth, clubbed the aged man to death.

None of the sordid details of one of Garland county's most gruesome murders was omitted. House told of a plan that he said originated with Drayper to rob Menser, who it was believed kept large sums in his modest home in the Bonnerdale community, 20 miles southwest of Hot Springs. He and Drayper had been to Perryville the day of the murder, and on their return stopped at Menser's.

House said that they went in the house and found the old man in his nightgown lying on a bed.

House said that he started to get up and strike the aged man with an automobile tire tool, when he shook his head, indicating that he had decided not to have anything to do with the robbery. Drayper, however, struck Menser on the head and felled him.

House declared.

Bulletins

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—Henry Freeman and Dave Hart, young negroes, held on charges of attacking a white girl, were shot and killed Friday in a prison cell by deputies after they had slightly wounded Sheriff Frank Clancy with a smuggled revolver.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Fourteen men were indicted by the District of Columbia grand jury Friday on mail fraud charges in the sale of oil royalties and deeds from two counties in Oklahoma and Texas. The government contends that the men fleeced several score persons in six states of at least $500,000. They are accused of selling royalties that did not exist.

NANKING, China.—(Copyright Associated Press)—An assassin's bullets Friday wounded Premier Wang Ching-wei, generally regarded as the pro-Japanese leader, and three other officials of the Chinese Nationalist government. The assassin was killed. Wang Ching-wei is in a critical condition.

Luck Robbery Trio Are Believed Held

Three Men and Car Answering Description Taken at Hot Springs

Three men answering the description of the bandits who hijacked Luck's Tourist Court west of Hope early Thursday were arrested at Hot Springs Friday morning. Sheriff Jim Bearden was advised.

One of the suspects, Sheriff Bearden said, is Ray Hendrix, former Hempstead county man and one of a quartet arrested in a downtown hotel here last spring on a confidence charge.

Hendrix, the sheriff said, is known to Hot Springs police who revealed the name. Identity of the other two suspects could not be learned locally.

Odell Luck and a negro cook, menaced by pistols during the hold-up, left with Sheriff Bearden at noon Friday for Hot Springs where they will attempt to identify the suspects.

Sheriff Bearden said that he was advised that an automobile answering the description of the one used by the bandits here was found in possession of the three men. It was 1935 Oldsmobile sedan, painted blue and trimmed in red.

The robbery here netted the bandits $43 in cash and about $10 in cigarettes and cigars. Two of the robbers entered the station, covered Odell Luck and a negro cook with pistols, and robbed the cash register.

With the holdup complete, they joined their companion in the car and drove away toward Hope.

Woman Talking in Her Sleep Betrays the Slayer of Six

Mrs. Peggy Paulos Says She Saw Leo Hall Murder Six in Seattle

HIS PRINTS CHECK

Hall's Attempt to Repeat Murder for Robbery Leads to Arrest

SEATTLE, Wash.—(NEA)—Because a woman who talked constantly in her sleep about wholesale killings finally yielded to her conscience, and because a "stranger in town" knew too much about Portland, Ore., streets, the mystery of the ghastly mass murder of Erland's Point, Wash., may be solved.

For a year and a half, police have been baffled at every turn in their search for the fiend or friends who battered and shot six persons to death in a beach home on Puget Sound, north of Bremerton, Wash.

But now, sitting sullenly in his cell here, they have Leo Hall, 33, former boxer, a charge of first degree murder lodged against him.

In custody also is Mrs. Peggy Paulos, 27, beer parlor waitress, the woman with the conscience. In the police department safe is her signed confession, naming Hall as the mass killer.

House Party Arranged

Frank Flieder, 45, a retired Bremerton grocer of moderate wealth, and his third wife, 50, widow of a Bremerton druggist, occupied the waterfront death cottage, their permanent home.

They were a couple who liked to entertain. The cottage often was the scene of gay parties, where drinks were plentiful and pinocchio was the favorite pastime.

On the night of March 29, 1934, they had invited four friends to drop in for an evening.

Two of their guests were a once noted vaudeville team, Eugene Cheney, 38, known as the "Singing Bartender," and his wife, 30, a singer and dancer, who had been billed as Bert and Peggy Vincent in their stage days.

The other two were Fred Balcom, former Bremerton bartender, and Magnus Jordan, 62, retired navy man, a welcome party man because of his skill at cards.

Bind and Gag Four

Mrs. Cheney and Balcom had arrived and a pinocchio game was in progress. Mrs. Flieder, lying on a couch and the other three playing, when the killer and his aide reached the home, according to Mrs. Paulos' story.

"We walked in and Leo told them to 'stick 'em up,'" said the waitress. "He told me to bind them, and I did, with adhesive tape, sheeting, and shoe laces. Then I taped their eyes and mouths, all except Mrs. Flieder."

Then Hall started to search the house, she said, but was interrupted by the arrival of Cheney and Jordan in a car. They, too, were bound and gagged.

Hall continued his search for valuables. When he came back into the living room, Mrs. Paulos said, she urged that they make their getaway.

Six Are Slaughtered

"Not till I fix 'em so they won't talk," she says he replied.

Then from the living room to a bedroom and back to the cardroom the killer went, according to the way police have pieced together her story, beating and shooting his six prisoners to death.

Two days later, Thomas Sanborn, a neighbor of the Fliders, heard dogs barking frantically in front of their home. Investigating, he found three French poodles locked in a sedan, weak from hunger and thirst.

Founding on the front door of the home and ringing the bell, Sanborn gained no response. He peered through a window.

On the living room floor lay two battered and blood-drenched bodies, faces down. Their wrists were bound.

Hostess' Threat Cut

Sanborn called Sheriff D. L. Blankenship. Then, with another neighbor, he went back to the house of slaughter. They found that Flieder's throat had been slashed and that he had been beaten with a hammer almost

Mississippi Tax Rate Is Reduced

Governor Conner Acts After Legislature Has Done Nothing

JACKSON, Miss.—(AP)—By executive proclamation Governor Conner Friday reduced Mississippi's property tax levy for the year from five to four mills after the legislature had failed to vote further reductions, and had failed in an attempt to repeal the ad valorem levy.

The state senate Thursday had approved the "corrupt practices act" by a vote of 34 to 1 after eliminating provisions governing campaign expenditures, and approving several drastic amendments.

The bill provides safeguards about the polling places, limits the amount of contributions, requires newspapers to give equally prominent space to candidates answering charges made against them in print, and requiring voters to produce tax receipts in order to vote.

As the senate labored on the "corrupt practices act," which is similar to a bill approved by the house 10 days ago, and the house resumed consideration of revenue bills, no progress was made toward approval of a state emergency relief set-up that was to have become effective Friday when approximately 31,000 "unemployable family cases" on federal relief rolls are to be dropped.

Italy Repeats She Will Talk Peace

Fall of Italian War Plane Is Only Battle News on Friday

By the Associated Press

Italy returned to Geneva Friday ready to listen to any "acceptable" proposition of peace as the League of Nations committee prepared to fix the date for the application of boycotts.

King Victor Emmanuel, of Italy, came to the support of Mussolini in an address in Rome.

Emperor Selassie's advisors predicted that Italy would exhaust herself against the natural defenses of Ethiopia.

Eleven Ethiopians and three Italian troops were reported killed in a battle at Malke.

Plane Brought Down

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia.—(AP)—An Ethiopian government communiqué said Friday that an Italian military plane either fell or was brought down during an air raid last Tuesday at Bournana, near Dolo, on the southern front.

The communiqué said there was no news from other fronts.

A principal advisor of Emperor Selassie Friday predicted "painful surprises" are in store for the invading Italians.

This authority and other government officials said that if Mussolini disregarded the League of Nations imposition of sanctions and pressed on in warfare he would find the entire

Spinster's Slayer in Brutal Benton Case Dies in Chair

Choir of Condemned Negroes Sings to Him on Last Long March

CHANGES HIS STORY

Dobbs Had Named Three Different Men as "the Actual Murderer"

TUCKER PRISON FARM, Ark.—(AP)—Declaring another man to be guilty of the crime, Frank Dobbs, 35, dined in the Arkansas' electric chair Friday for the murder of Miss Fannie Orr, 51, spinster.

He went to the chair as four condemned negroes sang, "When the Saints Come Marching Home."

Dobbs made the statement shortly before he was placed in the chair that Miss Orr was killed and her sister, Miss Louise Orr, 56, was knifed by an ex-convict who accompanied him to their home near Benton last January.

Officers said it was the third person he had named: the crime, and placed little credence in his story.

Dobbs claimed he dragged the bodies of the women from the flaming building, while the surviving sister testified at the trial that it was she who took Miss Fannie's body from the house.

Dobbs claimed insanity at the trial.

Convinced Dobbs' sane

Superintendent Cogbill, who in cases like this is invested with semi-judicial powers under one of Arkansas' many freak laws, was emphatic in expressing belief that Dobbs is sane. The superintendent, refusing to grant a hearing, said that he had "observed" Dobbs' actions closely since he has been in the death house at the Tucker convict farm and that he had detected no change in the man's actions.

Attorney General Clegg Bailey had argued "vigorously" against the sanity hearing, before Superintendent Cogbill.

He said that the insanity defense had been presented fully to the Saline county grand jury that tried Dobbs and that the jury's verdict proved that the jurors placed no credence in the argument.

He argued that Superintendent Cogbill had no authority to order a sanity hearing unless he were convinced that Dobbs might have become insane since he was convicted.

Ex-Gov. Tom J. Terral who was hired by Dobbs' brother to represent the doomed man, did not attempt to argue that Dobbs' crime had any extenuating circumstances.

"He committed a heinous crime," said Terral. "However, if he is insane, he should be placed in the State Hospital for life."

Crime a Brutal One

Dobbs was convicted of the murder of Miss Fannie Orr, 51, who lived with her sister, Louise, 56, at their farm home west of Benton. He came to the sisters' home at night, terrorized them for hours, forced them to give him all the money they had and then killed the younger sister with a club and knife.

He also tried to kill Louise by cutting her throat, and left her lying on the floor, lifeless, as he believed.

He then set fire to the house. However, Louise revived and by a superhuman effort, managed to drag her sister's body from the blazing house. Louise's life was despaired of for days but she finally recovered and was the state's most important witness against Dobbs.

Her identification of him was positive and a long cross-examination failed to shake her testimony in the slightest.

She now is living with relatives in another state.

Kansas and Georgia Rapped by Hopkins

Neither Has Done Anything Toward Assuming Federal Burden

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Harry L. Hopkins assailed administration critics Thursday as he announced that the federal debt for direct relief will end in 20 more states November 15.

Asserting "my own hide has grown considerably tougher" in recent months, the Works Progress administrator said:

That the assertion of Gen. Hugh Johnson that the work relief program is a failure was "a lot of ——— damn nonsense."

That Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas has balanced his state budget by "taking it out of the hides of the people" that Kansas has "never put up a thin dime for relief" and that "as far as I know the governor has never made an effort to raise any more money."

That Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia was "unwilling to do anything. He believes in the whipping post."

Your Health

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

After spending 11½ years in the Arctic and living for about nine years of that time on an exclusive diet of meat, the explorer, Stefansson, was given a complete physical examination, in 1926. He found that an exclusive meat diet worked as well when he was inactive as when he was active and in hot weather as in cold.

After an exclusive meat diet lasting 12 months, two Arctic explorers living in New York were given similar study. In their cases, also, no serious changes were found. The blood pressure was not disturbed; in fact, in one man, it was lowered. The men had no lessening of physical or mental vigor.

Recently Stefansson was examined again, after a lapse of nine years, to find out whether there had been changes in his body as a result of the meat diet on which he had lived so long. He is now 55 years old and has aged very little.

He has been in excellent general health since he lived on an exclusive meat diet. He has worked rather strenuously, and has led a sedentary life, yet he does not suffer from any disturbance of his blood chemistry or of his digestion. He reports that he has no headaches, but occasionally some colds.

His blood pressure, although he is 55 years old, is 120 systolic and 80 diastolic, which is considered the normal blood pressure for a person aged anywhere from 21 to 45.

A meat diet is essentially a high protein diet. There has been a tendency for people to be afraid of proteins—a tendency utterly without basis, since proteins are the building materials of tissues. A large supply of our proteins is found in animal products and in dairy products.

The proteins from all meats, including that from fish and chickens, ducks and other fowl, is about of the same type. Chemists do not find any special differences between the red meat which comes from the cows and that which comes from the lamb.

Notwithstanding these facts, people who are disturbed by meat do all sorts of peculiar things. They will stop beef and continue to take lamb, fish, and chicken.

The one slight difference that exists between red meat and white meat is that red meat contains certain extractives not present in white meat. The peculiar ideas people have about red meat and white meat seem to be purely notions, and nowhere in the history of dietetics is there to be found any scientific basis for these notions.

Incidentally, animal organs which are largely protein supply in addition to the protein many of the important factors necessary for the blood and the proper functioning of the body.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Harvey O'Connor, who did such a splendid, surgical job on the tainted "New" in his biography, "Mellon's Millions," returns to the wars with an equally good job in a book called "Steel-Dictator."

This book, as the title suggests, is an examination of the great steel industry and its leading figures. Mr. O'Connor begins his tale with the rise of Carnegie, Frick and Schwab in the closing years of the 19th century, carries it through the vast era of cartelization begun by the elder Morgan, and winds up by declaring that private control of the industry has outlived its usefulness.

The industry, he says, suffers because it is largely run by men who neither know nor care much about the making and selling of steel, but are interested solely in the financial end of things.

It maintains a rigid price system, it rules its employees with most do all, it willfully restricts its output of a needed commodity; and, he concludes, "The nominal owners of the Steel Corporation control nothing and contribute nothing. The Steel Corporation has become a racket for the nourishment of bankers, brokers, gamblers, lawyers, and executives. It is no longer able to furnish work or wages sufficient to keep its employees off relief rolls."

"The conclusion is plain that private ownership of the Corporation has outlived any usefulness which the classical economists once postulated. . . . The price the finance-capitalists ask in poverty, violence, social decay, is too high."

A spirited and stimulating book, this. Published by the John Day Co., it sells for $3.

Your Children

Says Bobby: "Why is that tree red and the other one yellow?"

Mother answers the best she knows how, which isn't very adequately because she doesn't know herself.

"Why do the little trees grow around the lake and all the big ones on the hill?" Bobby wants to know.

"Because that is the kind of trees they are," says mother.

"But why don't the big ones grow around the lake and the little ones up there?"

"Maybe those little trees need more water," says mother.

"How can they get water? The water isn't around them."

"Their roots under the ground get the water. Where there is a lake or river the ground all around is very damp."

Mom and More Involved
"Don't big trees need water?"

"Certainly. All things that grow need water."

"Do the roots of the big trees grow away down here? They must be awful long."

"No, they get enough water out of the ground."

"Then why do the little trees have to be near a lake or something if they can get water out of the ground? Where is the water in the ground, mother?"

"It comes from the rain and soaks in and stays there."

"Then why—"

"Bobby, stop asking questions. You know all about it now. I never saw such a boy for asking questions."

Bobby wanted to know about water under the ground and if it went into a big hole or what. This was getting into physical geography.

Curiosity Dies Young
What began with the color of leaves promised to land up in geology and science. And in all probability from there to a discussion of astro-physics and meteorology. Or perhaps the banking system and the way to take care of bees. One thing leads to another always in a curious child's mind. There is no end. There is always a beginning.

If grown-ups were one-hundredth as curious about worthwhile things as children, they would, in time at all, be as thoroughly educated as Archimedes, Euclides and Aristotle put together. But, alas, curiosity dies with the years; even twenty finds the bud closing.

Certainly we don't educate children. They educate themselves. Oh, yes, we do our bit with pen and book, but a child of ten worth his salt will know a dozen times as much about this and that as all his books tell him. Don't laugh at curious children; instead, give them all you can give. Some day when you stick your head out of the car window to ask some old bourgeois the way to Hurricane or Boulder Top, it will most likely be a ten-year-old kid who pipes the answer while Old Burger is still scratching his head.

Glorifying Yourself

By Alicia Hart

With Indian summer well behind her and the social season making great demands on her time and looks, the girl who wants to survive the winter looking as pretty as she does now ought to make a final checkup on what must be done to preserve her beauty.

Hair that is glossy, shiny and healthy because of the reconditioning treatments you gave it in September won't stay that way unless you brush it daily, use a tonic now and then and have it rinsed after each shampoo. Wearing a hat all the time is bad for any scalp. Try occasionally to get some sunshine on your curls.

A figure that is lean and hard and supple from long hours of tennis, golf and swimming will get soft and less attractive a few weeks after it is cut off from exercise of any sort. Remember your setting up routines, promise yourself that you will walk briskly for twenty minutes each and every day and don't eat dozens of canapés and cakes late in the afternoon. The tea hour is a fine little social nicety, but unless you stick to tea and stay away from the platter of sandwiches, you'll spoil your figure.

The old saying about burning the candle at both ends may bore you to death, but if you expect to keep your skin clear and your eyes sparkling, you'd better consider it seriously—boredom or not. You simply cannot dance until three a. m. five nights a week and keep your natural beauty.

Dance all night, every other night if you like, but on the alternate evenings, cream your face and get to bed by ten. Or, if you have to stay up late every night for a week, plan to spend most of the week-end in bed. Arrange your life to allow plenty of time for rest and relaxation, mental and physical.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXVII

A BIG dark blue sedan sped swiftly along the concrete road. Its driver slouched behind the wheel, a cigarette drooping from his lips, his air one of careless negligence; but his eyes were alert, and his hands held the wheel firmly as the car hummed along at an even 65 miles an hour.

Beside him sat a broad-shouldered, athletic young man in a gray suit and a Panama hat. He sat half-turned, his arm over the back of the front seat, so that he could talk to the two men in the rear. One of them was small and dapper, a felt hat pulled low over his eyes; as he raised his left hand to take a cigarette from his mouth it could be seen that the hand lacked the index finger.

The man beside him was burly, with a brick-red face and sparse red hair. He stared absently at the youth in the front seat with eyes of a light, expressionless blue—pale eyes that, when you looked at them, seemed to be frighteningly cold and hard.

"Once again," he said, "you say the gas button is back at the cashier's desk?"

The man in front nodded.

"An' he can kick it without moving off his stool," said the red-haired man meditatively.

"Yeah. That's it."

"Okay. I'll take care of him. Shorty waits at the wheel, Wingy comes with me—you say you got to do the covering, outside, Oklahoma?"

The man in the front seat nodded again.

"Yeah. They got me too well spotted when I cased the joint."

THE red-haired man frowned slightly. "We could use you inside," he said.

"I'm just telling you," said the man in front, "I'm not going in that bank, See?"

There was a brief silence.

"Okay," said the red-haired man, at last. "You'll be on the steps, then."

The other patted a sub-machine gun which lay in his lap, and nodded. "With Annie," he said.

The car came up a low rise, swung to the left, and came to the outskirts of a little town. The driver eased its speed down to a sedate 25, and the car slid silently down a tree-lined street, past white houses that drowned amid shaded lawns.

Instead he simply shifted into low gear, kept his foot on the clutch pedal, and lolled behind the wheel in the deceptively careless manner which seemed to be his unvarying habit.

The doors of the car opened. The two men in the back seat got out first; the red-haired man kept one hand in his coat pocket, and the smaller one folded his arms to carry a large, ungainly something under his coat. They looked casually up and down the street and walked into the bank, the red-haired man in the lead. Then the broad-shouldered youth in the front seat walked up the steps and stood by the door, a sub-machine gun in his hands.

THE bank was quiet and peaceful, inside. Mr. Hobart, back at the cashier's cage, was counting out a thin sheaf of bills to a farmer; he looked up and smiled a dry, banker's smile as the farmer pocketed the money and stepped away, and saw a burly man with red hair striding toward him.

This man wasted no moves. Half-way across the lobby he took his right hand from his pocket. It came out holding a .45 automatic, whose blue-steel finish glinted softly in the dim light. Mr. Hobart stared at it, his eyes wide open. Before the first shock of surprise had passed he thought, with a flood of relief, of the tear gas installation, and prepared to reach out with one foot and touch the button that would release the gas.

But the red-haired man was ahead of him. In the fraction of a second that Mr. Hobart was tightening his leg muscles to move his foot the 18 inches to the gas button, the man leveled his pistol and fired.

In the ordered quiet of the little bank the crash of the automatic was like the explosion of a 10-inch shell. Mr. Hobart spun half around and gently sank to the floor, oblivious to guns, tear gas and everything else. A stenographer, who was clicking a typewriter a dozen feet away, gave a frightened little scream and looked up with a face as white as milk, her hands frozen to her typewriter.

Mr. Dunn, president of the bank, opened the door to his private office and came into the lobby—to find a dapper little man confronting him with a vicious-looking sub-machine gun. Mr. Dunn backed against the wall, his hands in the air. A moment later the stenographer and the farmer joined him there, while the little man with the gun smiled evilly and gently swung his gun back and forth so that its ugly muzzle pointed at one after another in turn.

The red-haired man had gone behind the grille. He cast a contemptuous glance into Mr. Hobart's cage, saw the Hobart lying motionless in a pool of blood, and motioned with his automatic for the young clerk to open the safe.

"Step on it," said the red-haired man harshly. "I haven't got all day." He grinned, a wintry, bloody grin that did not extend to his pale eyes, and added, "I got an engagement down the road that I'm especially anxious not to miss."

The fumbling clerk swung the door open.

So far everything had gone off on schedule. The cashier had been shot down before he could touch off the tear gas. The others were lined up against the wall, helpless. The clerk was obediently stuffing currency and securities into an empty flour sack that the red-haired man had tossed to him. The athletic young man, they called "Oklahoma," was out in front, cowering chance passers-by with a sub-machine gun. The automobile was waiting, its motor humming silently.

BUT there was one thing the gangsters had overlooked.

Across the street and half a block down there was a four-story brick building; and what the gangsters did not know was that the fourth floor of this building had been given over to the American Legion for club rooms, and that Buddy McGinnis, a war veteran whose right leg was under the ground somewhere near Montague, had chosen this morning to be up there performing his functions as adjutant of the post.

Everything would have been all right if Buddy McGinnis had not happened to feel the need of fresh air just at the moment that the bandits' car had driven up. For this reason, he was lounging in a chair by an open window when the holdup men went into the bank; and in the course of 20 seconds or so he chanced to glance toward the bank and see a man standing on the steps with a sub-machine gun in his hands.

Buddy took a long, unbelieving look; then he nodded his head once, slowly, grimly, and stomped across the room to a glass case behind which a dozen Springfield rifles stood in a long rack. He seized one of these guns, stomped to a small closet, and got out a clip of cartridges.

Buddy had not been the best shot in his company, or the second-best either, and it was years since he had fired a gun; but he took careful aim, waited until the blue silk necktie of the man with the machine gun rested just on top of his front sight, and then squeezed the trigger.

Oklahoma spun partly around, just as Mr. Hobart had done. His right hand let go of the gun and reached out for support, coming to rest on the plate glass window of the bank. For a few seconds he was poised there, swaying slightly, a pained and incomprehending look on his face. Buddy McGinnis watched and waited for him to fall.

But he did not fall. Buddy's aim had not been quite good enough—which made all the difference in the world. The bullet had punctured Oklahoma's shoulder without touching a bone; and once the first shock of its impact was past he was able to stand unaided, his feet far apart and his knees bent, lift his weapon with both hands, and spray a stream of bullets at the window where Buddy McGinnis was kneeling.

McGinnis had time for one more shot as he saw the machine gun being raised. It splattered against the wall of the bank; then the war veteran ducked out of sight, while 20 bullets went zipping through the open window, kicking up little splinters from the sill and knocking plaster down from the ceiling.

And then the town's one policeman, hearing this uproar, came running down the street, tugging at his revolver as he ran.

FIRST DOWN -AND THEN SOME BY HARRY GRAYSON

COLUMBUS—The great majority of football men and followers never had heard of Francis Albert Schmidt until he arrived at Ohio State last year, but it didn't take him long to gain their respect and confidence.

Schmidt, 200 pounds of nervous energy from Texas Christian, caught the popular fancy, not only with winning teams, but with his explosive manners, plain-spoken personality, and brilliant wit.

The Ohio State faculty had a little difficulty getting used to Schmidt's virile human language at first, but quickly accepted him as the campus, leading figure. He probably is the most popular coach ever to hit Columbus. Players and students consider him the last word in coaches.

Because his clubs manufacture tremendous scores against comparatively weak opposition, the Ohio State strategist has been tagged "Merciless." He is very human nevertheless, and his players slave for him.

Schmidt curses his boys plenty, but they love it. The athlete who gets bawled out the most has a good chance of starting the game.

Schmidt gets along very well with newspapermen, but they've learned to keep a tongue in their cheek when listening to him. He's apt to change his mind from one hour to the next.

Francis Schmidt

Called by telephone to give a starting lineup for an official program, Schmidt named 19 men.

For awhile, Mrs. Schmidt forbade the Ohio State mentor to drive the family car. There was danger of him wrapping himself and the bus around a telephone pole while jostling down a new play in an ever-present notebook.

Coach Schmidt Devotes 18 Hours a Day to Football

Schmidt, a driver from away back who works 18 hours a day, continually thinks and talks football. He usually works in his office in his shirt sleeves. He welcomes visitors, but even though he's met them time and time again, he doesn't remember their names.

Schmidt has pet names for most of his boys, such as Bobo, Bozo, Leatherhead, and Oil Can. He never runs out of nicknames or wisecracks.

Schmidt refuses to wear a topcoat while sitting on the bench during a game. He claims that he never notices the cold during the heat of battle.

Schmidt whistles shrilly to attract the boys' attention on the practice field. Although his style of play is as wide open as the Texas plains, where his teams formerly roamed, he has a mania to "keep the ball on the ground, dammit!"

Schmidt usually forgets appointments.

A born salesman and after-dinner speaker, Schmidt could hire out to speak every night of the week throughout the year.

His age seems to be a delicate subject with Schmidt, but he's 49 or 50. He was a star halfback at Nebraska in 1914 and '15. He was graduated from the law school there, but does not practice. He wears only bow ties.

Basketball Knowledge Asset to Buckeye Boss

Schmidt's first coaching assignment of any importance was at the University of Tulsa, where he lost one game in the last four seasons of a five-year reign before and after the war.

He left Tulsa for Arkansas, where he had the reputation of getting the most out of his material for seven campaigns.

With less talent than larger rivals, Schmidt won two Southwest Conference championships, tied for the title once, and finished second and third in five years at Texas Christian.

The headman of the Buckeyes has been even more successful in basketball than he has in football.

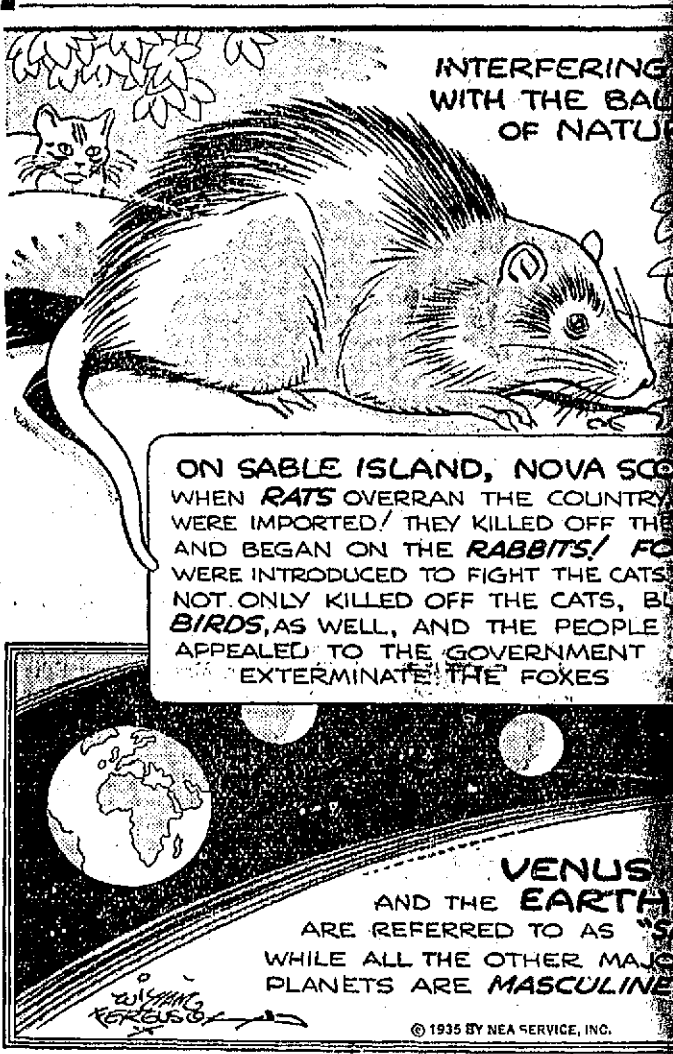

Football going basketball was right down Schmidt's alley. His knowledge of the hoop game no doubt played a big part in his developing, in less than two seasons, the finest set of ball handlers that such veteran and skillful exponents of the razzle dazzle as Bob Zuppke and Bo McMillin ever saw.

The Radio

Time was, the farm wife standing in her door
And peering through the dusk across the hills,
Could almost hear behind her on the floor
The shadows creeping, creeping to the sill
Like ghosts of black Minorsas come to perch
There in the dark, so still the country night,
While sometimes from the rising mists, a bird
Would beckon till she turned and struck a light.
Time was... now always there is company:
An orchestra usurps the kitchen, while
A prima donna often comes to ten
And presidents revolve the creaking attic—
For neither mire, hub-deep, nor drifting snow
Can block the road against a radio.

home on South Elm street. A brilliant color scheme of the Halloween in yellow and black prevailed in the reception suite, with the proverbial lighted pumpkin welcoming the guests. The Halloween motif was more eloquently observed in the dining room, where the guests were seated at one long table, the central light was softened with the chosen colors and the window drapes were works of art, adding much to the attractiveness of the room. The dining table was laid in the Halloween colors, and held for its central adornment, the time honored witches, brewing the fortunes from the cauldron, with the black cats scattered about, surrounded with yellow lapers in yellow and black holders, each guest's place was marked with clever halloween favors including noise makers from the excruciating music, nut shells held individual fortunes, and each place was lighted with a small taper in miniature pumpkins, the entire table service and decorations making a most clever and exquisite picture that adhered so closely to the chosen motif, the effect was very pleasing. Covers were laid for twelve.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

JUDAH TAKEN CAPTIVE

Text: II Kings 25:1-12

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for November 3.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.

Editor of Advance

The Babylonian captivity is a tragic chapter in Jewish annals that occupies an important place in history. Here we are concerned chiefly with the religious and social lessons to be derived from it.

Like all great catastrophes, it is to be studied not in its immediate causes, but in the events and circumstances that led to it and that made it almost inevitable when the final crash came.

The beginning of the downfall of Judah was in the divided nation. Palestine is not large. It would have required all the strength of that small territory incorporated under one strong rule to have established any measure of effective resistance to the warring empires of the ancient world. The little land lay between these empires, occupying something of the same position that Belgium occupied in the World War. The strong kingdom that David established, and that Solomon brought to heights of greater glory, weakened in the dissensions and rebellions that followed Solomon's death.

When Solomon died and Rehoboam came to the throne, there was a strong demand that the burdens of the people should be lightened. Rehoboam took counsel from two classes of people, the young men who advised him to rule with a strong hand, and the older men who advised him to correct the injustices of which the people complained.

Rehoboam's weakness and his heady course in following the advice of the young men led to a rebellion in which the kingdom of David and Solomon was rent in twain, and two kingdoms, the southern Kingdom of Judah and the northern Kingdom of Israel, took their place with parallel columns of rulers.

In the history of the Kingdom of Judah we have the story of the good King Josiah. But the history of kings and kingdoms is the record of how weak, perverse, and incompetent monarchs have come from strong and righteous predecessors. The northern Kingdom of Israel had already fallen before Assyria and now Judah, in a time of difficulty and danger, was under the rule of the weak King Zedekiah. The power of Babylon was dominant.

There might have been reasonable hope for a measure of autonomy on the part of Judah, in much the same way that Palestine later had a measure of autonomy under Roman rule, but that hope disappeared when Zedekiah rebelled.

The rebellion immediately brought serious consequences. Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, came with a great army and besieged Jerusalem. Jerusalem suffered the fate that great capitals have always suffered in the hands of invading foes. The temple and palace were destroyed, and every great house in the city was laid low with fire. The people who were left were carried off to Babylon, with only the poorest left to be vine-dressers and husbandmen.

The highest teachings and the spiritual recovery of Israel are associated with this captivity. It is these teachings that future lessons will emphasize.

ADIGRAT, Ethiopia.—Trained native troops, beating a trail for the main force of the Italian left column, occupied another village Thursday and seized wells to supply the Blackshirts with water.

The town was Mai Uccu, several kilometers beyond Edaga Hamus, Italian officers immediately dubbed it "Mai West."

Sharp action was reported earlier from the southwest border of Eritrea, where Italians crossed the Setit river and drove back Ethiopians massed at Nughin.

After dispersing the enemy, the Blackshirts re-crossed the stream and took up the defensive on their side.

The native troops of the northern forces have deployed tactically as far as Haulein, half way to strategic Makale, and have taken the natural fortress of Amba Sion, 30 miles from that objective.

Because it extends on a high plateau, has an excellent water supply and good pasturage, Amba Sion has been much fought over in the past by rival Ethiopian chieftains.

Revival Sunday at Church of Christ

Rev. S. C. Kinningham of Marshall, Texas, to Open Services Here

Sunday, November 3, the Church of Christ begins its fall meeting, with the Rev. S. C. Kinningham of Marshall, Texas doing the preaching. Mr. Kinningham is the regular minister for the church in Marshall. They have consented that he come here for this meeting.

The Rev. Mr. Kinningham is a young man with a pleasing personality, and presents the gospel in an inspiring manner. He did his school work in Harding College, Searcy, Ark., which means that he is competent in his work.

His sermons will be suited to all who come. They will build up the Christian's faith and instruct the sinner in the way of the Lord. The church welcomes the public to these services.

The time will be 7:30 p. m.

as Bob Stewart, who Justice said had $3500 to invest in manufacturing the carburetor.

"Stewart told me he was a stranger in the city," says Groat. "But one night when we were out for a ride, he told me to turn up the old Jefferson street road. I thought for a stranger he had a smart recollection of a long-forgotten road."

Other incidents increased Groat's suspicions that Stewart had sinister purposes. "I believe he plans to kill me," he told a friend.

"Stewart" Is Hall

Another date was made with Stewart and arrested Stewart.

They checked on fingerprints—and Stewart was Leo Hall.

Meanwhile, in Seattle, Mrs. Peggy Pauls had been talking in her sleep. The burden of her babbling was wholesale killings, her husband said, when he was jailed on a robbery charge.

Mrs. Pauls had been grilled several times, as had other suspects, about the cottage crime.

But before police could drag her in once more, her conscience prevailed. She went first to an attorney and on his advice to police. To them she told her story.

She informed officers that she had seen Hall two or three days after the killings and that he had threatened her life if she "squawked." Furthermore, he said, he would prove she killed one of the victims.

Hall is charged only with the slaying of Cheneyver. Tightlipped through a merciless grilling, he has refused to admit his guilt.

"But we don't care if he never confesses," say Seattle detectives. "We have the right man, beyond any shadow of doubt."

In the bedroom lay the body of Mrs. Flieder, the head battered, the throat cut, and the breast slashed. And last the searchers came upon the body of Balcom, jammed into a closet, his throat cut, jaw broken, and head crushed.

The house had been ransacked from top to bottom, furniture broken and flung aside, and blood-smear walls and floors.

Mrs. Flieder's $4500 worth of diamonds were gone, as were the men's purses.

The only living thing in the house was a cat, its fur spattered with blood, which darted, yowling, from room to room.

For weeks police of Washington and Oregon, with Canadian authorities cooperating, sought the killer or killers. But suspect after suspect was freed. The theory of revenge was discarded, as no support could be found for it, tracing back through the lives of the victims.

The hunt lagged and it appeared as if the mass killing would pass into police history as one more unsolved mystery.

Fate Steps In

Then Fate, which has an uncanny trick of stopping in to trip up murderers when they have been lulled into feeling certain of escape, took a hand.

Harry Groat, a Portland inventor, had constructed a carburetor for burning Diesel oil in automobiles. To him on October 11 came Jack Justice, whom he had known for 25 years.

Has Donated $72,000 From Radio Speeches to Furniture Co-op

WASHINGTON—(P)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had lunch Wednesday on furniture which her earnings of $72,000 from commercial radio broadcasts helped make possible.

The furniture came from the Reedsville (W. Va.) branch of a mountaineer co-operative sponsored by the Quakers, whose Friends Service Committee received the radio earnings.

Asked about the $72,000 figure announced by the Quakers, Mrs. Roosevelt said at her press conference that she didn't give it, in the sense that she never received it. She kept no accounts, she said. The money went directly to the committee.

Mrs. Roosevelt had received key women attending the annual outlook conference on farm family living at her press conference, and returned their call by lunching with them at the Department of Agriculture.

1936 Master De Luxe and Standard Chevrolets are Replete with New Features

New Master De Luxe and Standard Chevrolets for 1936 show marked advances in appearance and in engineering. Perfected hydraulic brakes, high-compression engines with full-length water jackets, and balanced carburetion are among the mechanical improvements. The solid steel turret top Fisher body is now used on the Standard as well as the Master De Luxe models.

New Master de Luxe and Standard Chevrolets for 1936, embodying marked advances in styling, engineering, and performance, were introduced November 2 at the New York Automobile show and simultaneously throughout the country at dealer salesrooms, which have already been liberally stocked with new models for display and delivery.

Completeness in equipment, in appointments, and in convenience is stressed in the company's 1936 announcement.

The Master de Luxe, offered with either knee action or conventional springing, has been restyled in its more important appearance elements, notably by the adoption of a higher and narrower grille of distinctively original design, in combination with a new treatment of the hood louvers, new style headlamps mounted on the sides of the radiator shell, and new interior trim.

The lower priced Standard models have been completely redesigned in chassis and bodies. Last year the Standard models have been completely redesigned in chassis and bodies. Last year the Standards differed materially both in appearance and in construction from the Masters; this year, the two lines are identical in all major features of styling, engineering, and performance, the chief difference being only a matter of wheelbase.

Outstanding among the many new features of both Master and Standard models for 1936 are perfected hydraulic brakes; improved engines having higher compression ratio (6 to 1), balanced carburetor, full-length water jacketing, and other changes resulting in better cooling and improved gasoline and oil economy; and chrome rust-prevention of fenders and running boards.

Front doors of all models of both lines are now hinged at the front.

The solid steel turret top, exclusive last year with the Master models, has been adopted this year for the Standard line also. Spoke-type pressed steel wheels, instead of wire wheels, are used on all Standard models.

Body interiors of Master models show marked advances in comfort and style. An important innovation is found in the design of the front seat arrangement of the Master coach and town-sedan. Instead of the usual divided and hinged front seat of two-door models, a single seat cushion extends the full width of the car, permitting three passengers to ride comfortably. The seat-back is divided, the right side section being hinged to fold forward over the seat cushion to open a passageway to the rear compartment.

Completely New Chevrolet's Standard models for 1936, besides incorporating features that appear for the first time on the Masters, take their place in the line as entirely new models, with new box girder chassis frame, more powerful engine, longer wheelbase and larger bodies. The line of body types has been increased to seven by the addition of three models—the four-door sport sedan with built-in trunk, the two-door town sedan with built-in trunk, and the cabriolet.

The Standard model wheelbase, formerly 107 inches, is now 109, while its overall length, last year 170½ inches, is 12 to 13 inches greater. Bodies are longer and wider, with more leg room, wider seats and additional head room. Car weight is increased 135 pounds. Springing has been improved by the use of longer front and shorter rear springs, which possess more nearly equal frequencies and so minimize pitching.

Side rails and cross members of the new Standard frame are all of rigid box section, a type of construction that has appeared on costly European cars but never before in the low price field in this country. Although greatly increased in strength and in stiffness, the box girder members add so greatly to the rigidity of the structure that only three cross members are required. The extra simplicity of the frame greatly facilitates access to chassis units for lubrication and service operations.

Horsepower of the Standard, formerly 74, has been increased to 79 at 3200 r. p. m. by changes in combustion chamber design, valve operation, and carburetion in combination with an increase in compression ratio from 5.6 to 6 to 1.

Clutch improvements include the use of a new "shot-blast" process of treating cushion springs of the disc, and a more accurate alignment of the release levers. A rail-type shifting mechanism on the transmission with positive interlock, has been substituted for the plate type formerly used. Fuel tank capacity, formerly 11 gallons, is now 14. A ventilated generator has been adopted.

Hydraulic Brakes
In changing to perfected hydraulic brakes on both chassis models, Chevrolet has adopted the hydraulic principle of brake actuation to its own design of brake mechanism within the brake drums. Instead of the cable operated floating cam formerly used at each wheel, a master hydraulic cylinder with double opposed pistons is used to actuate each pair of one-piece articulated brake shoes.

The master cylinder, whose piston is moved by the brake pedal, transmits pressure by a column of fluid to each of the wheel cylinders, is mounted on the frame. The master piston is one inch in diameter, while wheel pistons are larger to effect an increase of braking effect at the wheels. Front wheel pistons are larger than those of the rear wheels, to balance the braking effect when, in stopping, extra weight thrown on the front wheels gives them greater traction. This arrangement prevents locking the rear wheels by themselves by heavy brake application.

The hand brake lever actuates both service brake shoes and both rear wheels. The connection is by flexible cable, operating a lever and toggle mechanism within the rear brake drums.

On the Masters, brake drums are of composite construction, comprising a cast iron rim and a pressed steel web. The braking surface is accurately machined, after assembly to the wheel hub, assuring true concentricity. Long life, freedom from scoring, and more effective braking are advantages claimed for cast iron. The outer surface of the drum is machined in deep grooves that form five ribs, to promote cooling.

On the Standard, equally effective braking is obtained by using pressed steel drums, which are one inch larger in diameter than last year's increasing the brake lining area to 158¼ inches, 17 sq. ins. more than formerly. An improved grade of closely grained steel is used for the drums, and their braking surfaces are machined to accurate form and smooth finish. Dirt shields have been added.

Engines Have Been Refined
Engines of the Master and Standard models are identical in design and in horsepower and torque. Maximum horsepower is 79 at 3200 r. p. m. (an increase of 5 h. p. for the Standard). At 1000 r. p. m. horsepower is 20; at 2000, it is 60. Maximum torque is obtained over an unusually wide range of engine speed, 156 foot pounds being maintained all the way between 900 and 2000 r. p. m. The increase in compression ratio to 6 to 1 is credited with effecting a 6 per cent improvement in fuel economy. Combustion chambers are reshaped to attain smoothness with higher compression. The new chamber follows the "blue flame" combustion principles pioneered by Chevrolet several years ago, the form having been worked out by newly devised mechanical laboratory methods to attain maximum effectiveness.

Chevrolet's balanced carburetor is another innovation to promote fuel economy and easy starting. Air pressure in the float chamber is balanced with that inside the carburetor intake to affect a constant ratio of air to gas, the choking effect that gradually increases as the air cleaner becomes clogged with dust.

Cooling System Improvements
Major improvements have been made in the Chevrolet cooling system to maintain lower engine temperatures and to attain important benefits in the control of engine oil temperature and of cylinder block and valve push rod expansion. The chief change is the adoption of full-length water jackets. Formerly, only the upper part of the cylinders was water jacketed. In the new engines, the water jacketing extends far below the lowermost point reached by the head of the piston, nearly to the lower edge of the piston skirt at the bottom of the stroke. The rings thus come in contact only with cylinder wall surface that is constantly cooled. Since the full depth of the cylinders is surrounded by water, the cylinders warm up evenly.

The most valuable effect of full length water jacketing, however, is its automatic control of engine oil temperature. In the previous design, the engine oil would attain a temperature of 125 degrees hotter than the water, by coming in contact with the uncooled lower part of the cylinders. With the new full length jackets, oil temperature runs 50 degrees cooler than formerly. Still further cooling of the oil supply to the valve rocker shaft is effected by running the supply line through the cylinder block, where it is surrounded by water and the oil is further reduced in temperature by 10 degrees.

The new system not only maintains a lower constant oil temperature, but acts to warm up the oil supply to the valve mechanism more quickly after a cold start. Since the water in the cylinder block, held there by a thermostat, quickly heats when the engine is started, it begins to warm the copper tube carrying oil to the rocker arms almost immediately after the engine is started. The effect is to cause a more nearly even expansion of the cylinder block and the valve mechanism.

Water capacity of the entire system, formerly 11 quarts, is now 15.

ties, were these concrete work relief developments:

1. Hopkins allotted funds to 39 states for continuing the dole during November—with six already cut off direct relief, while allotments to three others including Kansas remained undetermined—but gave 20 only enough to carry them until November 15 deadline for liquidating their relief administrations.

2. Secretary Ickes and Hopkins joined in warning power companies that they cannot force cancellation of FWA municipal power projects by tying them up in the courts until after the December 15 deadline.

3. Ickes released $1,000,000 to the New Orleans Sewerage and Water Board for sewerage and drainage projects, but said there had been "no change" in his order halting all projects and barring further applications pending repeal of laws dictated by the late Senator Huey P. Long.

Observing that he now has enough money to put 3,500,000 persons to work, Hopkins warned that after December 1 there would be no federal help even for states lacking funds to support unemployed.

He then charged that both London and Talmadge had defeated attempts to provide state funds for the care of unemployed.

The WPA said that a study of Georgia unemployed (for whom fed-

Woman's Weak Nervous Condition Helped by Cardui

In thousands of cases where Cardui has been taken to help women "overcome monthly discomfort," it has been reported to have been of valuable assistance.

"Before I began using Cardui, I was so weak that when I closed my eyes I felt like I was going to fall," writes Mrs. J. W. Harris, of Pelzer, S. C. "I was very nervous and had a pain in my side. At times, I would have to go to bed. This made me more nervous as I had six children and there was always work on a farm. My mother had taken Cardui and told me to try it. I took six bottles, after which I was up and able to do all my work, washing and ironing. I have nothing but praise for Cardui."

Of course, if Cardui does not help YOU, consult a physician.

When the easiest way is the best way...

There are no two ways about it! Certainly the easiest way to get the most for every dollar you spend is to buy products that you know about through the advertisements in your daily paper. You don't have to go out and look for buying opportunities. The advertisements bring them to you. And all you need do is consider the facts, compare values and decide on the soap or the sedan that best fits your judgment and your pocketbook.

Certainly the best way of making your money go farthest is to buy merchandise of proved value. Advertised merchandise. Merchandise that is bought and used by many people. Merchandise that must be superlatively good enough for its maker to keep calling it to the attention of people day after day and year after year.

This is the service—of convenience and profit—that the advertisements offer you every day. It will pay you to read them regularly and take advantage of everything they can do for you.

Dictatorial Spirit Spells Doom for Earth, Says Webb

Nebuchadnezzar's Dream
Throws Light on World
Politics Today

MUSSOLINI'S RISE

Even in America the People
Lean Too Much on Single Leader

The Rev. Bert Webb preached at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle Thursday night that Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the great image and its interpretation given in the second chapter of Daniel, was the scriptural foundation of his message. He said:

Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream clearly indicated that the Babylonian empire, of which he was the ruler, was the head of gold, after which inferior world kingdoms would arise. This part of the dream or prophecy has been fulfilled in the rise and fall of the Medo-Persian, Grecian and Roman empires, and today we are living in the last and the age depicted in this revelation. Bible scholars are agreed that the feet and toes, part of iron and part of clay, are representative of the one we are living in today, the iron representing the monarchical governments and the clay the democratic governments of this age.

Toward Dictatorship

Let us ask: What part do Mussolini, Hitler and Roosevelt play in this drama? First of all, there is a definite trend today toward dictatorship. It is prophesied that when the Anti-Christ shall set up his kingdom he shall be a supreme dictator. Mussolini's rise to power was quite dramatic. After working in secret for a while, he finally demanded of the king of Italy that he be made chancellor, even ruler. The king at first objected, but was convinced that Mussolini could take the rulership by force.

Fox Hunters Will Meet Nov. 4 to 7

Arkadelphia to Be Host to Annual Hunt, Field
Trials, Bench Show

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—The Arkansas Fox Hunters association, which will hold its annual hunt, field trials and bench show here, November 4, 5, 6, and 7, has announced its program in full and officials of the body have said an attendance of from 1,000 to 2,000 is probable.

Judge R. M. Ruthven of Mountain Home is president, and James A. Winn of Little Rock, secretary. J. C. Beck of Patterson, a state director, is chairman of the Arkadelphia fox hunters group, which is sponsoring the annual convention and hunt. The Grindstone Ridge region, 10 miles north of Arkadelphia and in the foothills of the Ouachita mountains, will be the scene of the fox chase. Local hunters have enjoyed many hunts in the region in this and recent years.

The three-day program has been announced as follows:
Registrations of fox hunters at the Chamber of Commerce upon arrival at Arkadelphia. Field trials, for only all age dogs will begin at daylight, November 4 and be held also at daylight on November 5 and 6. All entries for the field trials must be made and marked up on or before midnight, Monday, November 4. A fee of $1 will be charged for each entry. A state champion will be declared, also second, third and fourth place winners declared. Prizes will be awarded. Competent field judges will be chosen. E. I. Nowblock, an official of the Southwestern Fox Hunters association, will serve as master of hounds and judge of the bench.

The bench show will be conducted Wednesday afternoon, November 6, at 3 p. m. No additional charge will be made on those entries which have also been entered in the field trials. A fee of $1 will be charged for those dogs not in the field trials. Prizes will be awarded derby dog, derby bitch, all aged dog, all aged bitch, best hound in show, and best of opposite sex.

Business affairs of the association will be attended to immediately after the bench show, when state officers will be elected.

Governor J. M. Fretwell will be the principal speaker at the Fox Hunters Dinner, 7 p. m. Wednesday, November 6.
